DANIELSON

Instead of being well on their way to Camp Eustis, Va., this morning, the service battery is in Danielson still as the result of a change in orders as to the time of departure received by Capt. F. O. Armstrong over the telephone Friday afternoon, providing you are reading this before noon and providing there has been no further change in order.

The battery was to have left town on a special train at 6 a. m., but under the new order they are scheduled to haul out at 12:30 p. m. today and run the big motor trucks at the state armory to New London, from which city they will depart for the south at 6:45 this afternoon.

Captain Armstrong and members of the battery were at the state armory Friday afternoon and evening, engaged with the final preparations for the trip, which for many members of the battery, made up largely of very young men, will be the longest in their experience.

Herewith is presented the complete roster of the company and also the address to which mail packages may be forwarded in order to reach any member of the battery, which is smartly equipped with olive drab uniforms and with thoroughly good equipment for the trip:

Captain, Frederick O. Armstrong.

PUTNAM

Wilfred Sharpe, youthful married son of Dr. and Mrs. Harry W. Sharpe, was back on his job in a Main street store

Friday afternoon after undergoing the unique experience of being kidnapped by his wife, a woman more than twice his years, and other members of a party of five that seized him while he was at Wildwood park dancing Thursday evening, forced him into a United States army automobile and whisked him away.

Where he would have been taken had not the army car stalled just across the Rhode Island border a few miles east of here and allowed another car bearing

Putnam police to overtake it, is a matter of mere conjecture, but it may be set down with all certainty that the kidnap-ing party was made up of three men, two of them wearing the uniforms of soldiers, the other in civilian attire, and two women, one of whom was Mrs. Wilfred Sharpe. They boldly seized young Sharpe at the pavilion at the lake, warning all who witnessed the incident not to interfere, hustled him into the army car, a Dodge sedan painted in the regulation olive drab, and shot away before the amazed onlookers gathered their wits sufficiently to realize just what was happening.

A telephone message to the Putnam police set things in motion here in a jiffy.

Assuming that the car would make a run out over the Chepachet highway toward

Providence, Captain Remi Delage, Officer

Eugene Gibeau, Dr. Harry W. Sharpe, and a driver raced eastward and after a few miles came upon the army car stalled behind the highway, the machine having gone dead from some trouble or other.

One soldier was busy working about the motor when the police car arrived and Captain Delage gave the party warning that one false move would mean instant response from the officers' revolvers. The three men in the kidnapping party promptly submitted to the inevitable and then demand was made upon them to deliver up the youthful Sharpe.

They made known that he was with the two women at the side of the highway just a little distance from the car. Captain Delage had one of the liveliest experiences of his official career when he ran afoul of Mrs. Sharpe. The officer says she fought like a wildcat to prevent her husband from being taken away from her, that she clinched with him and wrestled about until it finally became necessary for him to draw his revolver and shoot his arm and fire, to frighten her into loosening her hold, which she did, shrieking "I'm shot!" which she was not. Captain Delage, not desiring to pummel a woman, had been forced to adopt a substitute method of subduing her, and she ruse worked well.

With Sharpe freed from the kidnappers, the Putnam party put him in their car and brought him to the home of his parents. He was so bruised by the rough handling he received and by being set upon while the car was making its run from the lake to where it was overtaken that he was unable to work Friday morning, but was at his duties Friday afternoon.

The kidnapping incident amazed the people of this city and surrounding territory. The army car that figured in the affair has been seen about Putnam quite frequently lately, and the assumption is that it is plotting to be waiting for a favorable opportunity of seizing the young man and hurrying him away.

The fact that an army car was used and that men in soldiers' uniforms figured in the kidnapping affords a groundwork for ascertaining the identity of every member of the kidnapping party. Providence authorities were intensely interested in the whole affair on Friday and the Friday evening papers in that city gave the kidnapping conspicuous publicity.

The young man who was kidnapped is a graduate of Putnam High school. Last year he was in Providence. While staying there he became acquainted with a woman known as Mrs. Morris, then resident at 223 Fountain street. He is just over 21, while the woman is well along in middle age and the mother of several children.
